

Abstract

Encapsulated component with low overall height

- 5 For simpler and safer encapsulation of components, it is proposed to generate the connection between a chip and a carrier substrate by means of bump connections that are sunk into recesses on the carrier substrate. The component thereby lies directly on the carrier substrate, in particular on a frame circumscribing the component structures on the chip.

10

Figure 1
